SAVE THE EARTH CONTEST

Saving the Earth ... One You Tube at a Time

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Ft. Lauderdale, FL – January 30, 2010

Contact: Alex Pacheco 954 464 9331 AlexPacheco2005@yahoo.com

In an unusual twist, animal activists are turning into Environmental activists and have produced the "Save the Earth Contest" for kids and adults, offering laptop computers as prizes.

"The contest uses Michael Jackson You Tube videos, songs by John Lennon and the Beatles, high profile news articles and United Nation reports on today's 'hottest' earth issues, to stimulate creative thinking and solutions to critical earth problems and to reward creative minds." says it's creator, Alex Pacheco, best known as the co-founder of PETA, which he left after serving as it's Chairman for 20 years.

Pacheco, now a resident of South Florida, has traded in his "radical" ways for more conventional tactics designed to change the world ... "One You Tube Video at a Time".

Nearly a dozen high profile celebrity and environmental leaders have volunteered to serve as judges for the contest, which will culminate in the middle of Earth Month in April. All of the celebrity judges are keeping their identity a secret for the time being and are serving as mystery judges.

Anyone can enter! Pick any of 3 videos to watch or 3 articles to read and then answer 3 questions -- that's it! Be prepared to be educated!

Where: contest is online at www.SaveTheEarthContest.com and the winners will be announced near the end of April.
